Summary

This is a fast passed mindreading game, about guessing when the opponent player is lying and telling you the truth.

Start the game

Every player start with picking up a card. The players follow up with choosing which player is going to beggin.

During the players turn. The player has to choose if he's going to lie or tell the truth about which card he holds in his hand("I have a 9 of clubs in my hand"). The players states this to the opponent player sitting next to him, going clockwise.

The opponent player has now two choices;

- Claim that the player is lying/telling the truth.
- Turn to the next opponent player and claim to have a equal or higher card.
- Claim that the player is lying or telling the truth: If the claming player guess is right, the claiming player gets 2 points. If the claiming player guess is wrong, the player who claimd what card he had gets 2 points. The turn goes over to the opponent player.
- The opponent player turns to the next player and claims to have an equal or higher card: Now the next player has to take a guess, or claim to have a higher och equal card.

Players who are forced to reveal their card do so, and pick up new cards.

Who wins?

The player that gets 12 points first, winns the game.
